HOLATCHAWAY CAMP NOW ON

CHILDREN FROM THREE COUNTIES HERE FOR 3 DAYS.

IS 4-H CLUB PROJECT

J. Ross Fleetwood, County Extension Agent, Is Big Boss.—Several Others Assist.—Held At Tourist Park.

With the blare of a bugle, the patter, patter, patter, of a hundred or more feet; a stentorian voice shouting, "Now children, be quiet;" and the drip, drip, drip of oceans of drops of perspiration, Camp Holatchaway started off in full swing shortly after noon today.

All morning long, children poured into the Tourist Park, assembling for the annual camp of 4-H club members of Holt, Atchison, and Nodaway Counties. In cars, by train, and even by foot in some instances, they arrived. For, in case you aren't aware of the fact, Holatchaway Camp is the one great mig crowning event of the year for a 4-H boy or girl.

J. Ross Fleetwood, Nodaway County extension agent, is the big gun of the camp. And E. T. Itschner and C. W. Davis, agents of Holt and Atchison counties, respectively, are his assistants.

In Charge of Girls.

Mrs. Mary Paxton Keeley, a feature writer on the Atchison County Mail, is ex-officio supervisor of girls at the camp. Although Mrs. Keeley steadfastly maintains that she has nothing whatsoever to do with the administration of the camp, everyone else asserts that she's the absolute authority on things feminine.

The health of the camp, which will last through Wednesday, is in charge of Misses Margaret Davison and Minnie Strobel, health nurses from Nodaway and Holt counties.

And, oh yes, last but not least, the most popular man in camp—if the way to the heart be through the stomach—is Jack Pennington. He and Mrs. Jack are the bosses de kitch, as they say in Paris.

And then, there are also some other bosses. Oh yes, there are lots and lots of bosses. They are the local leaders, in charge of the several club groups. These minor bosses are: Mrs. Clyde Goodpasture and Albert Sipes, Graham; Virginia Herren, Watson; and Jane Salmond, Tarkio.

When the bugle blew this afternoon, the children assembled for the first conference of the camp. Following this, games were the order of the afternoon. Later there was a swim in the pool at the new College gymnasium.

The boys and girls are being lodged in the cottages which line the drive through the Tourist Park, as guests of the State Teachers College.

Real "Chow" Provided.

The menu for supper tonight indicated the kind of "chow" which the authorities have outlined for the camp. It follows:

Sliced ham and cream gravy, potatoes baked in the jacket, sliced tomatoes, green beans, ice cream cones, bread and butter, and milk.

Following are the boys and girls enrolled in the camp this year. This list was taken at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon and indications are that the number will be about doubled by late tonight:

Raymond Crater, Ravenwood; Xetah Kelley, Lois Mae Dakan, and Marion Dakan, Maryville; Max Wray and Donald Wray, Hopkins; Madeline Cook, Tarkio; Lillian Stapel, Rock Port.

Virginia McNeal, Naomi Brindle, Belva Carder, Virginia Herren, and Lucile McMillen, Watson; Josephine Rhodes, Hallie Graves, and Louise Burke, Fairfax; Everett Brown, and Donald Bernhardt, Phelps City; Dale Steck, Tarkio; Allen McMillen, Blanchard; Richard Burke, Fairfax.

Editor Mills Here Today.

H. W. Mills, editor of the News-Jeffersonian of Mound City and also postmaster of that city, was in Maryville today. Mr. Mills brought his daughter, Dorothy, to the 4-H camp at the local tourist park and stopped over in Maryville on his way back home.

Temperature Is 102 at 1:45 This Afternoon

Mercury In J. R. Brink's Official Thermometer Sets New High Mark. —Rain Is Badly Needed.

Registering 102 at 1:45 o'clock this afternoon, the mercury in J. R. Brink's official thermometer set a new high mark for the present season. The thermometer has registered 100 twice this summer.

Rain is badly needed in many sections of the country and in some places the corn is beginning to "fire."

FOUR MUSICAL NUMBERS HERE

COLLEGE ENTERTAINMENT PROGRAM IS ALTERED.

ALTERS MUSIC WEEK

Instead Of Confining Numbers To That Period, They Will Be Scattered Through Year.

The entertainment program at the State Teachers College next year will be of a varied nature from that of this and past years, according to an announcement made today. For example, the musical features will not be confined to Music Festival week, but will be scattered throughout the year. Music Festival will be more on the nature of presentations by College and Maryville High School organizations, with perhaps one or two outside numbers.

Four musical numbers have been engaged so far for next year. The first will be sometime in October, when Suzanne Keener, coloratura soprano, will appear in a concert here. She is a member of the Chicago Opera Co., and, although a young artist, has attained a marked degree of prominence.

The second of the concerts will be in December, when Eugene Schmitz, pianist, will appear in two programs. In an afternoon program, he will give a lecture recital, and at night he will give his regular recital.

The third number will be on March 11, when the Cherniavsky Trio, composed of a pianist, a violinist, and a cellist, will give an evening entertainment.

The fourth number will be given about the last of April or the first of May, and will be a concert by Merle Alcock, contralto.

Three or four other numbers will fill out the program for the year. It is the plan to bring some outstanding person in the literary field to Maryville, and it is also likely that some good play will also be secured for an appearance.

Spanish War Vets to National Camp

Local Auxiliary Also Will Be Represented at Meeting Starting Next Sunday at Des Moines.

Members of Roosevelt Camp and auxiliary who will leave Sunday morning to attend the national encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans at Des Moines are Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Snyder, Dr. and Mrs. C. P. Fryer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Reynolds of Guilford, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Jackson of Mound City and E. M. Duke of Stanberry.

The railroads have granted a rate of one fare for the round trip, and Spanish War veterans or members of their families who wish to take advantage of the reduced rate may obtain the necessary railroad certificate from Commander Snyder.

Mr. Snyder is department (state) junior vice-commander. Mrs. Snyder is delegate from the local auxiliary, Dr. Fryer is delegate-at-large from Missouri, Mrs. Fryer is a member of the state council of the auxiliary and Mr. Reynolds is delegate from Roosevelt Camp. Mrs. Kerr is the alternate from Roosevelt Auxiliary.

The convention commences Sunday night, August 15, and will last four days.

Dr. and Mrs. Fryer and Mr. and Mrs. Snyder expect to make the trip by motor.

Project at Fourth and Dunn Finished

The beautification of Fourth and Dunn streets was completed Saturday by city workmen under the direction of Mayor W. O. Garett. Several loads of dirt were placed on the parkways at the sides and in the center of the two-way street, and grass seed was planted.

CHAUTAUQUA PROGRAM YESTERDAY IS OUTSTANDING.

CONTRALTO PLEASING

Devine Explains Mexican Condition. —Filipino Serenaders Good.—Prohibition Lecture Tonight.

Jean MacDonald, Scotch-Canadian reader at the Chautauqua yesterday afternoon, was just as good if not better than all the nice things said of her previously. From the time she informed the audience she was Scotch until her final reading she kept the large crowd in laughter or in tears, mostly the former.

"Wonderful," said many persons as they left the tent about 5 o'clock. Miss MacDonald was probably at her best in the school program although her old maid number ranked first with many.

The Carlo Fischer trio, consisting of violin, cello and piano, furnished the prelude. Most of the numbers were very well received. The trio, with Nevada Van Der Veer, furnished the program last night.

Audience Appreciative.

Following the concert yesterday afternoon, Mr. Davis said they had never played before a more appreciative audience. The head of the organization was truly a real artist as was the pianist. The violinist also won favor. All three of these musicians frequently give programs from the Minneapolis, Minn., radio broadcasting station.

Madame Van Der Veer had a pleasing appearance and a friendly smile which were great assets. None of her numbers won more applause and probably none showed the splendid range of her strong voice better than her rendition of "Annie Laurie."

Fink's Hussars furnished the prelude this afternoon and Alex B. MacDonald gave a lecture on "Is Prohibition a Failure?" The prelude tonight will also be furnished by Fink's Hussars and Mr. MacDonald will talk on "Name Your Poison."

In his lecture Saturday night, Edward T. Devine explained the present religious controversy in Mexico. He told of the principal causes of the revolt, especially among the Catholics.

Explains Mexican Troubles.

Probably the underlying cause of the present trouble, Dr. Devine believes, is the enforcement of a provision in the Constitution of Mexico prohibiting the teaching of any religion in the schools.

It appears that in 1917 Mexico adopted a new constitution that was revolutionary in its changes. It went even beyond the American government in some of its demands for liberty and for economic changes. For instance, it adopted compulsory and universal attendance by children in secular elementary schools where religious instruction would be barred. It adopted the eight hour day for labor and forbade the employment of children. It adopted the six day a week labor system, making it compulsory that every laborer should have one day in seven for rest or recreation. It gave states permission to adopt a minimum wage system. It adopted compulsory compensation for accidents.

Took Over Great Estates.

It took over the great landed estates by purchase at a low price and paid for them in bonds and then began leasing and parcelling out the lands to the laborers of the country. It placed restrictions on foreign ownership of land, barring it entirely within thirty miles of the sea or sixty miles from the national boundaries after the deaths of the present owners. It gave foreign corporations ten years in which to sell their property to Mexicans. It adopted the theory that all minerals silver, coal, oil, etc., under the surface are the property of the state and may be leased only.

In carrying out these changes the government met opposition of the church and the controversy came to a climax last Sunday when the government took over all the church property of the country under rules so drastic that the entire priesthood of the country has resigned and the devout Catholics throughout the country have gone on an economic boycott in hopes to cripple or destroy the government and thus make it relent or modify its rules.

A Ruling On Politics.

The new rules provide that no political meetings may be held in any church and no religious meeting outside of a church, nor will the priests be permitted to discuss politics or advise their parishioners in any way politically. They are forbidden to have parochial schools, asylums, orphanages or hospitals. All ministers or priests must be native Mexicans. The number is also limited, the government or states reserving the right to designate the number permitted in each state. In the state of Hidalgo, one of the important states, the number is limited to seventy.

The Filipino Serenaders, consisting of seven talented musicians, furnished the prelude to the lecture Saturday night and gave the entire program Saturday afternoon. Their numbers were well received by the large audience.

Geoffrey F. Morgan will lecture at tomorrow afternoon's program on "The Problem of Leisure Time." The program tomorrow night will be the famous play, "So This Is London," presented by a New York cast. This play is said to be the feature of the entire program this year.

COUNTY'S NET DEBT $39,490

CASH BALANCE IS $24,079.45, WARRANTS $63,578.74

TAX TIME IS FAR OFF

When Receipts Begin to Come In, Unpaid Warrants Probably Will Total $100,000 or More

According to the semi-annual settlement of Mrs. Bess Thorp with the county court made last week, the finances of Nodaway County are in better shape now than they were a year ago and for several years back. The cash on hand on August 1 was $24,079.45 and the outstanding or protested warrants amounted to $63,578.74, leaving the county $39,499.29 in debt.

The bills allowed by the county court last week are not included in this settlement. As there are five more months yet before taxes will be turned in to the county, it is estimated the outstanding warrants by that time will exceed $100,000. Taxes will bring in about $150,000 in January, leaving a cash balance of about $50,000, for the rest of the year, 1927. The expenses of the county are estimated as about $12,500 a month. Early this spring the county "caught up," but since then all the money has been going out and little coming in.

The balances and outstanding warrants in the county funds on Aug. 1 were:

Salary fund—balance $673.68, outstanding warrants $6,816.44.

Pauper—balance $14,723.93, outstanding warrants $8,738.72.

Contingent—balance $1,553.68, outstanding $12,019.03.

Bridge—balance $6,651.76, outstanding $35,943.75.

Jury—balance $476.40, outstanding $60.80.

The balance in the pauper fund is large at this time on account of receipt of about $17,000 insurance money for the county infirmary.

Judge Sayler Weds Couple From Barnard

Ceremony His First Since Recent Appointment, But Experience Is Not a New One.

Judge J. H. Sayler, who was appointed justice of peace last week by the county court, today performed his first marriage license since holding that office. He married Richard Bowman and Annona Shipley, both of Barnard.

It was not the first ceremony for Judge Sayler, however, as he performed many marriages, when he was probate judge of this county, and also when he was a justice of the peace in Illinois when he was a young man.

Aleys Buy Purebred Sheep in Wisconsin

Mr. and Mrs. Guy D. Aley and son, Don Doyle, and Mrs. Aley's father, W. T. Doyle, returned Saturday from Pewaukee, Wis., where they attended one of the most widely recognized purebred sheep sales of the United States, held at the McKerron farms last Wednesday. The Aleys purchased several prize winners to add to their present flock of purebred Shropshires.

Miss Marie McGinness of Pickering was the week-end guest of Miss Thelma Peinisten.

DEMOCRATS IN EARLY START

SAM. W. FORDYCE IS AGREED UPON FOR CHAIRMAN.

DEARMONT IN CHARGE

Cape Girardeau Man To Be Executive Chairman.—Ellison Chairman Of Organization Committee.

St. Louis, Aug. 9.—Sam W. Fordyce of this city, an attorney with extensive business interests, will be recommended for election as chairman of the Democratic State Committee by the nominees of the state ticket and also the congressional candidates, it was decided at a meeting held here Saturday.

The candidates also recommended Russell Dearmont of Cape Girardeau for chairman of the executive committee to succeed S. B. Hunter of Cape Girardeau, who resigned because of pressing business engagements. Dearmont will take up his work at once at Democratic state headquarters, which will be opened in the Holland Building in St. Louis this week.

George Robb Ellison of Maryville is slated for chairman of the organization committee and a member of the executive committee.

For And Against Reed.

Fordyce is an intimate personal and political friend of Senator James A. Reed and supported him actively for re-election in 1922. Dearmont, the new chairman of the executive committee, fought Reed in his race for senator and has been identified in politics in Southeast Missouri with a group who gave Reed bitter opposition.

While Fordyce gave Reed active support in his race for senator and when he sought the presidential delegation in 1924, he has not been identified with any phase of the bitter factionalism which resulted from Reed's fight upon the League of Nations.

During the world war Fordyce served as general counsel of the War Finance Corporation and upon his retirement received letters of warm commendation from William G. McAdoo, who was Secretary of the Treasury when he was selected as counsel, and Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, who succeeded McAdoo to the Treasury portfolio. Fordyce always has been a liberal contributor to Democratic campaign funds and in 1920 gave $2,500 to the National committee. He also gave a substantial contribution to the campaign fund for Woodrow Wilson in 1916, and donated $100 to the Woodrow Wilson Memorial fund.

Hawes Waives His Right.

Under an old Democratic precedent Hawes could have picked the state chairman, and insisted upon his election by the state committee. Not in recent years has a chairman thus selected been disapproved by the committee. Arthur W. Nelson, Democrat nominee for Governor in 1924, selected Joshua Barbee of Kansas City for chairman and Barbee was elected by the state committee. But Hawes did not insist upon this prerogative. He called together the other candidates and gave them an equal voice with him in selection of the chairman.

The members of the state committee will be elected by congressional committees on August 31. Fordyce will be elected a member of the State Committee from the Tenth St. Louis District, in which he resides, so that he will be eligible to the chairmanship. The state committee meets September 14.

The reason why the candidates picked Dearmont and Fordyce at this time is to give them an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the details around state headquaiters before the organization of the committee. Democrats plan to start their campaign at once and not wait until September 14, when the new state committee is organized. This will give several weeks additional time to organization work. Ordinarily, there is a complete let down in political activities between the date of the primary and the meeting of the state committee and the platform convention. This time lost cannot be made up in the short time intervening between the date of the platform convention and the general election.

Cockrell's Daughter Attends.

Miss Flora Cockrell, daughter of Judge Ewing Cockrell, whom Hawes defeated for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, attended the general meeting of candidates and members of the executive committee at which Senator Reed and several Congressmen made

U. S. ATTITUDE FINDS FAVOR

NOT POLICY TO INTERVENE, CHURCHMEN BELIEVE.

MAY CLOSE SCHOOLS

Sensational Developments In Religious Controversy In Mexico Are Expected Within Short Time.

Mexico City, Aug. 9. — President Coolidge's determination not to intervene in Mexico's religious conflict has found sympathetic understanding and not resentment in Catholic and Episcopal circles here.

"President Coolidge probably believes that America's interference in Mexico whether justified or unjustified would result in a controversy in his own country over the merits of such a course," said Bishop Diaz, spokesman for the Catholic episcopate, today. "The President desires to avoid controversies in a country singularly free from that sort of trouble during its entire history."

The week end found great evidence of religious fervor. The second Sunday of the suspension of the cult by the Catholic episcopate saw the Catholic churches crowded, some of them having larger congregations than under normal conditions.

Mexico City, Aug. 9.—Developments of a sensational nature in the Mexican religious conflict were forecast in well-informed circles today.

The Catholics, it is reported, are preparing to shut down the schools, depriving approximately two million children of their only means of education.

President Calles, it was learned, plans drastic action if the striking clergymen do not yield by tomorrow night. The nature of this action was not disclosed. That pressure would be exerted by foreign governments was believed inevitable today unless President Calles abandons his proposal to nationalize the Protestant churches in Mexico.

The British government has made diplomatic representations on behalf of the English churches which own property in Mexico.

Pickering Road Is Accepted by State

4.85 Miles of Nine-Foot Paving Is Placed Under Maintenance—Inspection Made Saturday.

State approval was given the 4.875 miles of new nine-foot concrete paving on the Maryville-Pickering road, when a final inspection was made Saturday by J. E. Carlson, division construction engineer, and H. H. Davidson, project engineer in charge of the highway office here.

The state highway commission accepted the entire project and it will be maintained from now on by the state maintenance department. A guard rail has been placed at a narrow place in the road at the north end of the project.

Final cost estimates have not been completed by Engineer Davidson. He will be busy on them for two or three weeks.

STILL INSIST DEBT CLOSED

CLEMENCEAU MAY HINDER RATIFICATION OF PACT.

AN APPEAL FOR MERCY

Veteran "Tiger" of France Writes President Coolidge That Obligation Not Wholly Commercial.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Georges Clemenceau's open letter to President Coolidge on the Franco-American debt agreement may hamper ratification of the Mellon-Berenger pact by the French parliament, high treasury officials said today.

While the acting secretary of treasury declined to be quoted, the treasury spokesman declared that Clemenceau, through his letter, evidently was aiming at the Poincare government and was seeking to consolidate French public opinion against the agreement.

The treasury reiterated that the debt question was a closed book with it and said no reply to Clemenceau was forthcoming.

Paris, Aug. 9.—The Republican-Democratic group in the Chamber composing 104 deputies today unanimously decided to send a letter of thanks to former premier Clemenceau for his open letter to President Coolidge regarding French debts to the United States.

Minister of Pensions Louis Marin, leader of the group, did not participate in the act. The "Tiger" appealed to the American President not to consider the war debt as a mere commercial matter.

"A MONEY PEACE WON'T DO."

Clemenceau Declares Business Methods Can't Be Used In Settling Debt.

Paris, Aug. 9.—M. Clemenceau's letter to President Coolidge protesting the present war debt payment follows:

"Mr. President: Divergences of opinion have arisen between the three great countries allied and associated in the war as to settlement of accounts, which threaten to have a serious effect on the future of the civilized world.

"On each side technical experts in finance are at work. A technician is too often a man whose pleasure consists in isolating his own problem from those which he is occupied in co-ordinating.

"Everything in public affairs contributes to form a whole, and anyone who thinks he can isolate himself in his own domain is running the risk of finding himself overwhelmed later when it is too late to mend matters.

"The same question in identical terms exists between the United States and England, between England and France and between France and the United States, and I see that trial solutions or preparation for solution have not created a good state of feeling in the countries which are affected.

"We are debtors, you are creditors. It seems this is regarded as purely a matter for the cashier's department, but are there not other considerations to be taken into account?

"Hitherto, England's European policy has consisted above all in holding the continental nations in check by intervening and playing off one agaist the other. I am conviced that the man in the street is beginning to open his eyes to wider views. To day it is towards America that France's feeling of uneasiness is principally directed.

"If nations were only business houses, bankers' accounts would settle the fate of the world. You are claiming from us payment of a debt, not of commerce, but of war. You know, as we do, that our treasury is empty. In such a case the debotor must sign promissory notes and that is just what you are asking us to do, and yet each of us ought to believe that settlement in cash will be made on the day fixed.

"Now, it is an open secret that in this affair there are only imaginary dates of payment, which will lead up to a loan with solid security in the shape of our territorial possessions, as was the case for Turkey. Such a thing, Mr. President, I am bound to tell you we

SHAW AT SEVENTY.

A magazine writer terms George Bernard Shaw "the father of the flapper" and draws his arguments in support of this none-too-flattering characterization from any number of the prolific author's plays. It may be that the accusation is justly deserved.

Nevertheless, even though knee-length skirts and cigarets, excess cosmetics and promiscuous petting may be charged to the fulminations of the witty Irishman, it is doubtful indeed if he really meant to work so devastating a change in life and manners.

It is perfectly true that Shaw's heroines have always talked brashly, for he has delighted in putting into their mouths the most entertaining heresies. Always his long-winded prefaces have discussed at length the revolutionary doctrines one is supposed to read into his plays and no man was ever more insistent upon his own radicalism.

The fact remains that Shaw has never been radical in the framing of his dramas or in their conclusions. No hack writer ever watched his entrusted more religiously to time-tested hokum. And, by the same token, it is worth remembering that Shaw has never once neglected to get everybody into the right pair of arms.

As a playright, indeed, he has been invariably and essentially a conservative and his radicalism has been strictly confined to advertising himself and his plays. Always his revolutionary promises have distanced his performance.

Shaw is 70, now, and apparently very well satisfied with himself. He has achieved fame and fortune and he finds them sweet. We cannot conceive of him as troubled in conscience. Yet, were the flapper truly his creation, he must have his misgivings. At 70, surely, he has come to appreciate the correctness of the statement of that true radical, Voltaire, who said, "All truths are not for all men."

THE EDUCATIONAL CIRCUS.

"A circus is a traveling zoo as well as a peripatetic show," remarked a thoughtful father, telling of his own glimpse of elephants and tigers, of his small son's first glimpse of such beasts and of the wise father and grandfather who engineered both trips to the circus, a generation apart.

The understanding parent takes his small fry to the circus before the show, so that there may be a slow inspection of the marvelous animals on view. Beginning with the ponies and going on through the tent with the elephants, camels, lions and all the rest, the wondering child passes, big-eyed, thrilled, happy beyond words, taking in vastly more of what he sees than his elders give him credit for.

Then he sees the exciting performance, acrobats, clown and all. But his big impression, carried home after the performance and brought forward eagerly to any inquirer, concerns chiefly the first strange beasts that come into his range of vision. Thus the circus is found to be not only a circus, but also a zoo and an educational institution.

DEBT FACTS WANTED.

A little more frankness on the part of the government might help to clear up some of the existing debt confusion, softening foreign anger against America and explaining to Americans some of the reasons for that anger.

As things stand, however, two explanations of the debt situation seem to have been offered—one for home and one for European consumption.

The home explanation pays little attention to the interest items, but asserts that in the main our debtors are paying us in full. The explanation offered abroad computes the interest at a high rate and suggests that there has been a high percentage of cancellation.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

Washington—Headquarters of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is about the most optimistic place in Washington these days.

As the anti-prohibition folks see it, things have been breaking their way so fast recently that they actually believe—or profess to believe—they stand some chance of having a majority in the next congress, which is more than they dared hope for until very recently. They did look for gains, they say, and for victory in a number of statewide referenda, but not for a congressional majority earlier than two years hence.

The senate's prohibition investigation and the prohibition angle of its slush fund inquiry laid a good foundation for moist campaigning, preliminary to the fall elections, spokesmen at wet headquarters observe, but they never expected to see such a super-structure on top of it is later developments have built there.

Andrews May Quit

The sequence of events was rapid. First came the Dwyer rum ring trial, with its revelation of coast guard graft and of A. Bruce Bielaski as a dry under-cover man for the justice department at a salary of $13,200 a year, or $3,200 more than the next best paid man in the entire department except Attorney General Sargent, and within $1,800 of what Sargent himself gets.

Then followed unofficial but almost certainly authentic confirmation of reports that Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews will resign as dry czar, as soon as he returns from England, on the ground that prohibition is unenforcable without stricter laws than now exist, which seems an impossibility, inasmuch as so dry a congress as the present one failed to enact them at its last season.

Fired Green

Finally came the suspension, by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Winston, of the northern California and Nevada prohibition administrator, Col. Ned Green, on charges of drinking seized liquor, giving it to his friends and entertaining them at wet parties.

When it is considered that Green was Andrews' right bower and supposedly was slated to succeed him, it becomes apparent that this was extremely serious.

KEEPING AN EYE ON THE WEATHER

By HERBERT LITTLE.
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Aug. 9.—The weather first and foremost as a topic of conversation, has a decided economic value to many people.

Experts of the U. S. Weather Bureau here have saved millions of dollars by predicting, or advancing a possibility of weather, at a certain place at a certain time, based on previous records.

Insurance companies seek much information on weather. One tornado and windstorm insurance firm sought the history of a certain locality to determine to what extent it was subject to disastrous storms.

A committee in charge of a July 4 roundup in a western state was about to spend $300 for rain insurance, when some one had a happy thought of consulting the weather bureau, which found that rain rarely fell there on that date. The committee did not spend the $300—it didn't rain.

Farmers in one state were considering a big increase in the acreage of potatoes, so they obtained information here showing how their territory compared with the principal potato-growing sections.

The bureau is the only American agency which keeps records of ocean weather, and this is frequently called for in settlements of damages for loss of ships and cargo. Officers of the merchant marine of this and nineteen other countries contribute to this information, through reports of weather on their voyages.

The bureau issues storm and flood warnings for the benefit of ships and shippers. The flood warnings are issued by local stations on the various great inland waterways, and the storm warnings on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. Similar services are maintained separately on the Pacific coast. Many of these warnings are sent out by radio, from private and government stations.

Development of new farming activity on the lower Rio Grande River in Texas has just resulted in creation of a new forecast district, and the bureau attempts to follow new developments to fill agricultural and industrial needs.

Another little-known activity is the measurement of rainfall, to determine effects of wide significance on crops, rivers and lakes. One of these investigations has shown that rainfall in the Great Lakes basin, diminishing gradually for the last 40 years, has caused the tremendous lowering of lake-levels. This lowering, which results in millions of dollars loss to shipping because the ships cannot carry such heavy loads, has been accentuated since 1917. The bureau advises that past records indicate that after a period of deficient rainfall the downpours return to normal or greater size.

Exploration is another weather bureau activity. One representative went to Spitzenbergen with the Byrd expedition, to predict the weather for him. Another is attached to the University of Michigan expedition to Greenland this summer, and he is in charge of the plan to install four stations to study the weather of Greenland and the effect of its huge ice cap and low temperatures upon the rest of the northern hemisphere.

From McCook they will go to Yellowstone Park on a two weeks' outing.

George F. Bramble Dies This Morning

Death Follows Several Months' Illness of Complications—Funeral Services Tomorrow Afternoon.

George F. Bramble, 64 years old, died at 1.20 o'clock this morning at his home on South Saunders street, following a several months' illness. Death was caused by complications arising from a stroke of paralysis last February.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Price Funeral Chapel, conducted by the Rev. R. E. Musgrave, pastor of the Christian Church. Burial will be in Oak Hill cemetery.

Mr. Bramble was born in Iowa, Nov. 6, 1861. He had lived in Nodaway County practically all his life, moving to Maryville from Skidmore about fourteen years ago. He was engaged in the blacksmith business. On Oct. 28, 1888, Mr. Bramble was married to Hannah Freeze, who survives with five children. They are: Mrs. Everett Baker, Mrs. Andy Baker, Louie, George jr., and Thelma Bramble, all of Maryville. He also leaves one brother, Charles Bramble of Overbrook, Kan., who is expected for the funeral. Mr. Bramble was affiliated with the Woodmen of the World Lodge.

No Investigation Yet by Governor Baker

Consults With Attorney-General and State Finance Commissioner Regarding Englewood Institution.

Jefferson City, Aug. 9.—Following a conference today with North T. Gentry, attorney-general, and C. E. French, state finance commissioner, Governor Baker said he had not ordered an investigation into the closing of the Citizens Security State Bank of Englewood. The governor said he did not know at this time whether or not an investigation will be ordered. He said, however, that the state finance department is making the usual investigation that is conducted when any bank is closed. There must be more definite information presented the governor, he said, before an investigation will be ordered.

Rescue Workers Are Hampered in Drilling

Obstinate Rock Formations Delay Progress In Efforts To Reach Five Men Entombed.

Salem, Ky., Aug. 9.—Hampered in drilling by obstinate rock formations, rescue workers were making a violent effort today to reach the five men entombed in the zinc and spar company's mine near here from one of three directions.

The men, trapped by a slide-in of mud and rock, have been imprisoned more than eighty hours and but scant hope was held today that they are still alive.

Survivors of Wreck Prisoners of Sea

Halifax, Aug. 9.—Twelve men, survivors of the ill-fated freighter Ringhorn, which crashed to pieces on Sampson Head, Scatterie Island, today are prisoners of the sea, off a lonely storm-swept island. The sea has not subsided since the Ringhorn, fog-bound off Sampson rock, went to its doom and took with her a toll of five lives. It may be several days before the captain and the surviving eleven members of his crew, all Norwegians, can be taken up.

"France is not for sale, even to her friends. Independent she came to us; independent we shall leave her. Ask yourself whether, according to President Monroe, you would feel otherwise about the American continent.

"If France were to disappear under the blows of her enemies and of her sworn 'friends' (this word friends is placed in quotation marks by Clemenceau himself), there would remain of her a name to be proud of.

"Wherein have we failed to fulfill all the demands of duty? Ought we to have surrendered our fortresses to Germany when she demanded them from us under penalty of a declaration of war? Will anyone get up and say we have done nothing but submit to the inevitable? Does Verdun prove we have fought badly?

"Yes, we have thrown everything into the abyss—blood and money—as England and the United States did on their side, but it was France's territory that was devastated scientifically. For three deadly years we awaited this declaration from America, 'France is the frontier of liberty'—three years of blood and money oozing from every pore.

"Come to our villages and read the endless lists of their dead and make comparisons, if you will. Was this not a 'bank account,' the loss of this vital force of youth?

"As Russia did at Brest-Litovsk, America has made a separate peace with Germany without even the slightest suggestion of an adjustment with her comrades in arms. That was the blood truce with the common enemy. Today, a money peace between the allied and associated powers is being devised.

"How is it we failed to forsee what is now happening? Why did we not halt under the shells and convoke a board meeting of profiteers to decide the question whether it would allow us to continue in defense of the finest conquest in the finest of histories? Must the myth of German reparations lead up to American cash collections?

"I have spoken freely to the honored head of a great people for whom I have preserved for fifty years my highest respect and friendship, because I believed that people was destined to receive from the Old World the torch of a great ideal of humanity to carry on higher and higher. It is now for that people to pronounce judgment on itself. I can only offer the supreme homage of my silence if I am mistaken.

"With homage and my deep respect, believe me, Mr. President,

"Georges Clemenceau."

Chautauqua Player Is Injured in Car Smash

System of Understudying Parts Enables "So This Is London" Cast to Continue With Play

Mrs. William Keighley, leading woman in the cast which will play "So This Is London" at the local Chautauqua tomorrow night, is in the Shenandoah hospital suffering from injuries sustained in an automobile accident Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Keighley, along with a Mrs. Bently, also of the play cast, was driving from Shenandoah to Tarkio in a Ford coupe driven by Mrs. W. J. Finn of Shenandoah. The coupe collided with a Ford roadster occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Porter of Watson, who were on their way to Maryville. The accident occurred at a corner twelve miles south of Shenandoah, and both parties claim that it was unavoidable.

A three-months old baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Porter suffered concussion of the brain in the accident and died at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the Hamburg hospital.

Mrs. Keighley was badly scratched and bruised and will remain in the Shenandoah hospital the remainder of this week. Mrs. Bently was not badly injured and went on to Tarkio to fill her place in the play Saturday night. Mrs. Finn was not badly injured.

"So This Is London" played at Mound City last night, and Howard Mills, editor of the News-Jeffersonian there, said today that it was impossible to detect the fact that someone was taking Mrs. Keighley's part.

Play companies on Chautauqua make it possible for one person to understudy other parts for such emergencies as this. One of the minor women's parts was taken by a junior Chautauqua supervisor and one of the regular players went into Mrs. Keighley's part.

Mrs. Gilbert L. Aken and sons, Forrest, Orville, Donald and Joe, arrived Friday from North Platte, Neb., to visit relatives and friends a few weeks. Mr. Aken will join them here later for a visit.

Drainage District Sued by Engineers

Capital Reclamation Co., Asks $5,115 From Andrew-Nodaway Board.—Treasurer Also Sued.

For an alleged breach of contract for engineering services, the Andrew-Nodaway Drainage District is made defendant today in a suit for $5,115.24, filed in Circuit Court by John H. Nolen and Chester D. Mann, doing business under the firm name of the Capital Reclamation Co.

At the same time the engineers are suing Jacob Nelson, treasurer of the district, and his bondsmen, Carl Wray, Andy Nelson, Peter Nelson, C. C. Nelson, W. J. Beggs, Peter Kelley, J. L. Ballard, Eunice Parr and the heirs of J. R. Nelson, deceased—charging that the refusal to pay three warrants, totaling $1,446.92, caused them damage of $1,032.07, for which judgment is asked, in addition to the penalty provided by the bond.

The suit against the district states that on November 11, 1919, its board of supervisors entered into a contract with the Capital Reclamation Co., of Jefferson City, to do the engineering work for the district. The plaintiffs declare they performed all the tasks set forth in the contract except those which they were prevented from doing by the district board.

The contract provided that the engineers were to receive 35 cents for each acre of swamp and overflow lands in the district and such lands adjacent to the district as would be benefited, one-half to be paid on acceptance and adoption by the board of the report of the engineers as a plan for reclamation, and the other half upon receipt of funds by the board from the sale of bonds and upon the letting of contracts for the improvement. In addition the engineers were to receive 2½ per cent of the cost of the improvement and for changes in the plan were to receive their costs plus 25 per cent. If the boundary lines were extended they were to have 25 cents for each acre added.

The petition states that $1,814.61 was paid the engineers on March 9, 1920, as one-half of the 35 cents for each of the 10,586 acres in the district. This, the petition says, was $37.88 short of the correct amount, and the second half was not paid at all, although $10,000 was received from sale of bonds on Feb. 23, 1923. The amount alleged to be still due from this clause in the contract is $1,8990.43.

For additional surveys from February to August, 1921, the engineers declare they submitted a bill for $311.91, which was refused, and that a similar bill of $226.61, for work done in October of the same year, likewise was refused.

They ask also for $2,686.29, as 2½ per cent of the warrants for $107,133.89, paid out for construction work, and for $350, the 2½ per cent fee on $14,000 alleged to be still due the contractors.

The engineers declare they were "able, willing and did offer to prepare plans and specifications and to superintend the construction, to have a civil engineer stake out the work ahead of the machines doing the work, measure up and report each month to the board of supervisors the amount of work done, and see that the work was done according to plans and specifications," but that "plaintiffs were prevented from so doing by the board."

The suit declares the district now has "ample funds" and asks judgment for an aggregate sum of $5,115.24 with interest at 6 per cent from the dates given.

DENY REPORTS OF UPRISINGS

RUSSIAN OFFICIALS SAY ALL IS PEACEFUL.

DISCOUNT DISPATCHES

British Foreign Office Believes Reported Revolt Against Soviet Probably Overdrawn.

Moscow, Aug. 9.—Reports from Bucharest describing a Russian revolution extending from the Black Sea to Leningrad are false. Absolute peace prevails throughout the entire country, the United Press was informed by the government, including the Ukraine and other parts of southern Russia where open rebellion was said to have been in progress for three days.

Large numbers of Moscow and Leningrad workers regularly are arriving or departing for South Russia where they habitually spend the summer's vacation.

No mobilization has been ordered except the regular mobilization of 21-year-old youths, which is an annual event. Gregory Zinovieff, instead of leading a revolt, as was reported, is at a mineral springs where he is taking his annual "cure." He will return early in the autumn to Moscow to resume his duties as president of the Communist Internationale.

Moscow, Aug. 9.—The soviet government has denied reports circulated throughout the world that a revolution has broken out in Leningrad and that there is a mutiny in the Kronstadt garrison.

The brief denial came from the foreign office after many messages had been received indicating that reports were current throughout Europe of widespread trouble in Russia. The message may indicate a Russian censorship of more than usual strictness.

London, Aug. 9.—Official dispatches received by the British foreign office today failed to carry any confirmation of reports of revolt in Russia. The foreign office announced that it was discounting all reports of Russian disorders.

Reports of a Russian counter-revolution, led by Trotzky and Zinoviev continue, however, to swamp London daily. A Vienna dispatch says that the Russian Black Sea fleet had mutinied, shelled several Crimean towns and captured Odessa. Current reports say that an attempt has been made to assinate M. Stalin but that it was unsuccessful.

The Daily Mail, reviewing the situation, expressed the belief that neither Trotzky nor Zinoviev are sufficiently powerful to succeed. Dispatches from Bucharest also report mutiny in the Black Sea fleet. The dispatches tell of the revolt in Leningrad and the Kronstadt as well as throughout the Ukraine.

1926 Barnard Picnic Cleanest Ever Held

Sheriff and Prosecuting Attorney Report No Infractions of Law.—Success in Other Ways Also.

This year's Barnard picnic, which was held Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is declared to have been the cleanest picnic ever held. This opinion was expressed by many of the Barnard people and has been confirmed by the county authorities here. The picnic was free of vice, immorality and booze.

Sheriff Lowell B. Campbell and four other officers were at the picnic and not a single arrest was made for illicit handling of liquor. George Pat Wright, prosecuting attorney, also attended the picnic. The officers were not only at the picnic but also on the outskirts and the side roads near the picnic grounds.

Good crowds attended the picnic on all three days and it was a success in every way.

Atuos Collidge at Burlington Junction

Two automobiles were slightly damaged but no one was seriously hurt in a collision which took place Saturday night on Main street in Burlington Junction.

One car, driven west on Main street by Grant Van Meter, about 9 o'clock, struck another driven by Almond Walters. In the Van Meter car were Miss Ina Spangler, Eldon Spangler and a guest at the Spangler home. They were scratched and bruised and the front wheel on their car was broken. With Walters were Mr. and Mrs. Glen Brittain. They escaped serious injury.

SUICIDE CAPS MURDER CHAIN

MAN HELD AS MRS. CARMODY'S SLAYER KILLS SELF.

THE THIRD TRAGEDY

Former Champaign, Ill., Chief Of Police Fires Fatal Shot While Coroner's Jury Deliberates.

That Mrs. Anna Carmody of Champaign, Ill., was murdered was the opinion of a coroner's jury at Champaign Friday night. Mrs. Carmody was a sister of George Fred Davis of Maryville and the funeral services and burial took place in Maryville last Monday..

Simultaneously with the inquest, tragedy, for the third time, entered the case when J. J. ("Jake") Michaels, a central figure in the probe of the murder of Morgan Knox, negro, and the mysterious death of Mrs. Carmody, shot himself while in custody in the police station. He fired the shot while the coroner's jury was recommending that he be held without bail as an accessory in the death of Mrs. Carmody. Michaels died Saturday night, according to dispatches from Champaign.

Tragedy, for the third time, entered the Knox-Carmody case last night, when J. J. "Jake" Michaels, a central figure in the probe of the murder of Morgan Knox and the mysterious death of Anna Carmody, shot himself while in custody in the police station. He fired the shot while a coroner's jury was recommending that he be held without bail as an accessory in the death of Mrs. Carmody, at 4:30 this morning there was no hope for his recovery.

The shooting came as a terrible climax in a chain of circumstances that has kept the community at fever heat since the body of Morgan Knox, colored, was found riddled with bullets on a country road northeast of Urbana. That was on the morning of July 22. Mrs. Carmody's name was linked with the Knox death because of their business associations and an insurance policy which contained a rider, with Mrs. Carmody's name attached. Next Mrs. Carmody's body was found south of the Champaign Country club, the morning of July 29, a bullet in her head. Because of business association, the name of Michaels was linked with that of Mrs. Carmody.

The jury's verdict, the tenor of which had been anticipated by a crowd that filled the court room at the city building and overflowed to the sidewalk, follows:

"We, the jury, find, according to evidence presented, that Anna Carmody came to her death by a gun shot from unknown source, and recommend that J. J. Michaels be held to the grand jury without bond."

When the jury retired to form its verdict, Michaels was led from the room when it was cleared by order of Coroner Strode, and taken to the office of Chief Keller, an office Michaels occupied some 15 years ago himself as chief of police. He was taken to the room by Sheriff Gray, who had foreseen that Michaels would be held following his admissions on the witness stand. Dwight Lyons and Night Captain Roy Argo were in the room.

"I suppose I'll be charged with accessory to murder," said Michaels, drawing on his knowledge of law obtained as a police officer.

"I'm sorry; that's what it will have to be," replied Gray.

"Do you think I did it?" asked Michaels, but got no reply.

Michaels seated himself in the northeast corner of the room.

"You cleaned up the Carmody case, now tell me about the Knox case," said Lyons.

Michaels did not reply, but got up and started across the room to the southwest corner.

As he reached the corner, Sheriff Gray said, "I'll have to search you for your own protection, not mine." The search began while Michaels was walking to the corner, with Gray behind him.

Michaels had removed his hand from the right front pocket of his trousers and was holding a 25 calibre automatic pistol concealed, his hands at his side. Suddenly he raised his hand. There was a sharp click as the hammer fell on the empty barrel. Then two shots in rapid succession, as Gray grabbed for the arm that held the gun.

The immense crowd attracted by the inquest was keyed to a high pitch. But the inquest opened and progressed for a short time in the usual manner. At times there was tragedy written into the record as witnesses described the discovery of the body. Then came comedy as other witnesses took the stand. On one occasion Coroner Strode threatened to clear the court room unless the noise was abated.

The Witnesses Testify.

First came Charles Collins, a farmer, who told of having found the body under a tree on Prospect avenue road, south of the Country club. Then came police officers who described the body. A finger expert from Paxton said he was unable to obtain prints from the weapon found at the side of Mrs. Carmody, a weapon that Michaels gave to her a year ago. Marie Smith, colored, housekeeper for Mrs. Carmody, told of having had possession of the gun and claiming it as her own. She told how she had hid the gun under the bed, and her testimony brought laughter. She told of Mrs. Carmody's fear of mob violence, of her fear when Mrs. Carmody failed to return home the night before the body was discovered. She told of her calls to various places where Mrs. Carmody might be found and of her search of the streets.

Such evidence was given and then Michaels was placed on the stand. He told of having been with Mrs. Carmody during the morning and during the afternoon. He described how he frequently met her and of their automobile rides while they discussed business. He denied she had destroyed any papers. He denied knowing anything about her death. But he was racked by nervousness while he talked. He was dismissed from the stand and returned to his chair within easy hearing distance of the witnesses to follow.

Then followed witnesses who began tearing Michaels' story to pieces. Matt Dunn, C. H. Gilmore, George Moultrie and others, farmers, told of having seen Michaels and a woman—some of them knew Michaels—on the North Prospect road, north of Route 39. They told of the woman getting out of the car, crossing the road, returning to the car and recrossing the road a moment later. They found a fire she had set to papers. The fire spread to the grass. Gilmore extinguished it to prevent it from reaching an oats field. The Michaels car was parked on the wrong side of the road at the time.

Riddle His Story.

Witnesses told of having seen Michaels—they also knew him—on the South Prospect road at a time that conflicted with that he had given in his testimony. By this time, Michaels was trying to induce the coroner to let him go back on the stand and change his testimony.

Then came the hardest blow—delivered by a 12-year-old boy, Lawrence Lindsey, a caddy at the Country club, told of having heard three shots fired on a road south of the club, near the sixteenth hole, where he was stationed. He told of one of the bullets having whizzed over his head, of having seen a Ford sedan on the road. Michaels, by this time, was almost distracted. Other witnesses told of having seen Michaels on the South Prospect road. The end was in sight.

Michaels was called to the stand again.

"I'm through—it is all over—I'm a ruined man—I'm ruined socially and financially—she was in me for $19,000," were the statements that came in rapid succession. He finally was quieted enough for him to tell his story.

He had witnesses fix time definitely, he had heard witnesses tell that Mrs. Carmody said when they completed their present transactions she would no longer deal with him in the real estate business and money loaning in which they were engaged. He had heard Emanuel Davis, brother of Mrs. Carmody, question the handwriting of letters delivered to him by Michaels, that the doubt was so great that an expert has been asked to give a decision as to whether the writing was done by Mrs. Carmody. The letters had been read in the presence of Michaels and relatives of Mrs. Carmody, and it had been agreed to keep the contents secret. One letter placed blame on Sheriff Gray for a public statement he is alleged to have made which she thought had injured her. The other disposed of her property to relatives. In neither did she mention suicide, but intimated that she feared death.

Michaels began talking. He told of having quarreled with Mrs. Carmody. He denied he had touched her. Then he admitted that three shots were fired. He admitted that he had shown her how to shoot the gun, but he denied having had complete possession of it. He told of their trip along the South Prospect road. He said when the place where the body was found was reached she leaped from the automobile. He said he continued north. He admitted the truth of witnesses who said they had seen him going south later. He admitted he saw the body lying under the tree. He denied he had placed the shock of wheat under her on which her body was found. He denied having heard the shot that killed her. He kept repeating that he was "through," that he was "done for." His right hand kept working in and out of his pocket. Persons noticed this. His pocket flared open and something that resembled a clasp purse was seen. Whether intentional or not, Grant Stamey, a member of the coroner's jury who sat directly in front of the witness chair, leaned forward as if anticipating a move. But a weapon was not brought to view.

A more broken man than was Michaels as he left the witness chair cannot be pictured. He reeled to his chair as Coroner Strode announced that all the evidence was presented and instructed the jury. While this was being done, Sheriff Gray stepped to the side of Michaels to take him to the chief's office. The room was cleared, but the crowd awaited in the desk sergeant's office and on the sidewalk for the verdict. Then came the shots and pandemonium reigned.

"Who was it?" was the question that was hurled from one to another. "Did Michaels kill himself?" "Did he kill Gray?" These, too, were questions that were asked. The answer came a moment later when Gray emerged from the room and told what occurred, while a physician was being called. The Nelson ambulance was called. Dr. W. E. Schowengerdt arrived and said the wound probably was fatal. Dwight Lyons, who has been working on the cases and who also was in the room when Michaels shot himself, Harm Bienhof, Illinois Central special agent who has been working on the Knox case, and A. M. Nelson, in charge of the ambulance, took Michaels to the Burnham City hospital, where Dr. Schowengerdt ordered an x-ray picture of the wound and continued to care for Michaels.

Michaels' home is at 509 South Prairie street. He has a wife, a son, Richard, and a daughter, Mrs. Bee Gibbs, who, with her husband, reside at this home.

These Newlyweds Beat the High Cost of Living

These four newly-married couples of Williamsport, Pa., have a way to beat the high cost of living. They clubbed together and rented a house, pooling their funds to pay for food, fuel, lights and so on. As a result they are living for only $60 per couple each month. They are, left to right, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grady, Mr. and Mrs. James Dawes, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Haines and Mr. and Mrs. Herman Zimmerman. Before marriage Mrs. Grady, Mrs. Dawes and Mrs. Zimmerman were Margaret, Viola and Annabelle Haines, sisters of Harry, one of the husbands.

The GIRL in the MIRROR

By Elizabeth Jordan

COPYRIGHT BY THE CENTURY COMPANY

THE STORY.

CHAPTER I.—Barbara Devon's wedding and departure of her honeymoon leaves her brother "Laurie," successful playright but somewhat inclined to wildness, without her restraining influence. His theatrical associates, Rodney Bangs and Jacob Epstein, promise to "keep an eye on him."

CHAPTER II.—Laurie, who is wealthy, refuses to settle down to work, announcing his intention of resting and seeking "adventure." From his window in New York he sees the reflection of a beautiful girl in a mirror in the house opposite.

CHAPTER III.—Devon learns from the elevator boy in the girl's house that her name is Mayo. Again in the mirror's reflection he sees her with a revolver and fears she means to commit suicide. He breaks into her apartment and, winning her confidence, induces her to lunch with him, though she warns him of "danger."

CHAPTER IV.—Perceptibly agitated by the arrival of a man in the restaurant, she mutters that he has "found her." Learning that she is unmarried and the man has no claim on her, Laurie, incensed, accosts the stranger.

CHAPTER V.

Mr. Herbert Ransome Shaw.

The man in the shabby blue-serge suit detached his absent gaze from the opposite wall, and looked up quickly when Laurie stopped at his side. He was clearly surprised, but courteous. He half rose from his chair, but the newcomer waved him back and dropped easily into the vacant seat opposite him. He was smiling. The man in blue serge was not. He looked puzzled, though vaguely responsive. A third person, watching the two, might almost have thought the episode the casual reunion of men who frequently lunched together.

Laurie leaned forward in his chair, rested one elbow on the table, and, opening his cigarette case, extended it to the stranger. The latter rejected it with a slight bow.

"Thank you, but not before lunch," he said, quietly. His voice and manner were those of an educated man. The quality of his tone was slightly harsh.

Laurie lit a cigarette, blew out the match and looked straight into the stranger's projecting gray eyes. He had acted impulsively. Now that he was here, he was anxious to put the job over concisely, firmly, but, above all, neatly. There must be nothing done that would attract the attention of the few persons in the big room.

"I came over here," he said casually, "to mention to you that you are annoying the lady I am with. I want to mention also that the annoyance must stop."

The glance of the stranger held. Laurie observed with interest that the veiled look of the projecting eyes had changed a little. The change did not add to the stranger's charm.

"Before I answer you, tell me one thing," he said, formally. "By what right do you act as the lady's protector?"

Laurie hesitated an instant. The question was embarrassing.

"Has she authorized you to act?"

"In a way, but—"

"How long have you known her? How well do you know her?"

Command of the interview was slipping from the younger man. He resolutely resumed it.

"Look here," he said, firmly, "I came to this table to tell you something, but I will decide what that is to be. I am not here to answer questions. It is enough for you to know that circumstances have given me the right to protect the lady from annoyance. I want to make it clear to you that I shall exercise that right. Hereafter you are to let her alone. Do you understand? Absolutely alone. You are not to follow her, not to enter places where she can see you," he recklessly ended.

The stranger looked at him through the light veil which seemed again to have fallen over the projecting eyes.

"I should really like to know," he said, "when and where you met her. I saw you starting off together in the taxicab, but I am not quite sure whether your first encounter occurred this morning."

"And you won't be." Laurie stood up. "I've warned you," he said curtly. "I don't know how well you understand our laws in this country, but I fancy you know enough of them to realize that you cannot shadow a lady without getting into trouble."

"She admitted that?" The stranger appeared to experience a tepid glow of emotion. "She must know you better than I thought," he added reflectively. "Doris is not the type to pour her confidence into every new ear," he mused, seeming to forget the other's presence in his interest in this revelation.

"Have I made myself quite clear?"

Laurie was staring at him with a mingling of resentment and interest. The other nodded.

"You have, my young friend," he said, with sudden seriousness, "and now I, too, will be clear. In return for one warning, I will give you another. Keep out of matters that do not concern you."

Laurie grinned at him.

"You forget that I have made this matter my concern," he said, lightly. "Try to remember that."

The other man rose. His manner had changed to a sort of impatient weariness.

"Get her out of here," he said abruptly. "You are beginning to irritate me, you two. Take her home, and then keep away from her, unless you are looking for trouble."

He delivered the last words so clearly and menacingly that the waiter who had appeared with his luncheon heard them and fell back a step. Looking into the veiled eyes, Laurie also felt a sense of recoil. The fellow was positively venemous. There was something serpentlike in the dull but fixed look of those goggling eyes, in the forward thrust of the smooth brown head.

"I Came Over Here," He Said Casually, "to Mention to You That You Are Annoying the Lady I Am With."

"I've said my say," he retorted. "If I ever catch you around that studio, or in any way annoying the lady, I'll thrash you within an inch of your life; and then I'll turn what's left of you over to the authorities. Understand?"

He nodded and strolled back to Miss Mayo's table. For an instant the other man stood looking after him, as if tempted to follow. Then, with a shrug, he dropped into his chair and began the luncheon the waiter had placed before him.

Laurie found the girl standing by the table, ready for the street, her coat fastened, her gloves buttoned.

"Oh, how could you!" she gasped. "What did he say?"

Laurie summoned the waiter with a gesture and asked for his account.

"Sit down a minute," he suggested, "and tell me who he is."

"Not here," she urged. "I couldn't breathe here. Hurry, please. Let us get away!"

She was so obviously in earnest that he yielded. He paid the bill, which the waiter had ready, accepted that appreciative servitor's help with his overcoat, and escorted his guest from the room.

"But, for heaven's sake, don't run!" he laughed. "Do you want the creature to think we're flying before him?"

She flushed and moderated her pace. Side by side, and quite deliberately, they left the restaurant, while the stranger watched them with his dull, fixed gaze. He seemed to have recovered his temper, but it was also plain that the little encounter had given him something to think about. When he resumed his luncheon he ate slowly and with an air of deep abstraction, as if working out some grave problem.

"What's his name?" asked Laurie, as he helped Miss Mayo into a waiting taxicab.

She looked startled. Indeed, his most casual questions seemed to startle her and put her, in a way, on her guard.

"Shaw," she answered, unwillingly.

"Is it spelled P-s-h-a-w?"

Laurie asked the question with polite interest. Then, realizing that in her preoccupation she did not follow this flight of his merciful spirits, he sobered. "It's a perfectly good name," he conceded, "but there must be more of it. What's the rest?"

"He calls himself Herbert Ransome Shaw."

Laurie made a mental note of the name.

"I shall call him Bertie," he firmly announced, "to show you how unimportant he really is. By the way"—a sudden memory struck him—"he told me your name—Doris."

He added the name so simply that he seemed to be calling her by it. A faint shadow of her elusive smile touched her lips.

"I like it—Doris," Laurie repeated, dreamily.

"I am so glad," she murmured.

He ignored the irony in her tone.

"I suppose you have several more, like our friend Bertie, but you needn't tell them to me. If I had to use them every time I spoke to you, it might check my inspiration. Doris will do very nicely. Doris, Doris!"

"Are you making a song of it?"

"Yes, a hymn."

She looked at him curiously.

"You're a queer boy. I can't quite make you out. One minute you're serious, and the next—"

"If you're puzzled over me, picture my mental turmoil over you."

"Oh—me?" With a gesture she consigned herself to the uttermost ends of the universe.

The taxicab had stopped. They had reached the studio building without observing the fact. The expression on the features of the chauffeur suggested that if they wanted to sit all day they could do it, but that it would not be his personal choice. Doris held out her hand.

"Good-by," she said gently. "And thank you. I'm really more—appreciative—than I seem."

Laurie's look expressed more surprise than he had ever really experienced over anything.

"But we haven't settled matters!" he cried. "We're going to the bank—"

"We are not."

She spoke with sharp decision. Then, relenting at the expression of his face, she touched the heavy gold-and-amber chain around her neck.

"I can pawn this," she said briefly. "It didn't seem worth while before, but as I've got to go on, I promise you I will do it. I will do it today," she added hurriedly, "this afternoon, if you wish. It is valuable. I can get enough on it to keep me for a month."

"Till we find that job for you," he suggested, brightening.

She agreed, with a momentary flash of her wonderful smile.

"And you will let me drop in this evening and take you to dinner?"

"No, thank you. But—" again she relented—"you may come in for an hour at eight."

"I believe you are a crowned head," murmured Laurie, discontentedly. "That's just the way they do in books. When I come I suppose I must speak only when I'm spoken to. And when you suddenly stand up at nine, I'll know the audience is over."

She laughed softly, her red-brown eyes shining at him. Her laughter was different from any other laughter he had ever heard.

"Good-by," she repeated.

He helped her out of the cab and escorted her into the studio building, where he rang the elevator bell and waited, hat in hand, until the car came down. When it arrived Sam was in it. Before it stopped he had recognized the waiting pair through the open ironwork of the door. To Laurie, the elevator and Sam's jaw seemed to drop in unison.

The next instant the black boy had resumed his habitual expression of indifference to all human interests. Dead-eyed, he stared past the two young things. Dead-eared, he ignored their moving lips. But there was fellowship in the jocund youth of all three. In an instant when Laurie stepped back into the hall as the car shot upward, the eyes of the negro and white man flashed a question and an answer:

In Sam's: "You done took her out an' fed her?"

In Laurie's: "You bet you boots I did!"

His Boyhood Dream Was For a Menagerie All His Own

By ROY J. GIBBONS
NEA Service Writer

Holland, Mich., Aug. 9.—Many a barefooted small boy has felt that he would be the happiest youngster on earth if only he had a circus all his own.

George F. Getz felt that way when he was a lad of 6 on a Pennsylvania farm. Circuses came to town seldom, and when they did come Getz often didn't have enough money to go to them. But he vowed that some day he would own one—or at least own a lot of wild animals.

And now, at 60, a multimillionaire, Getz has made his boyhood dream come true.

Owns His Own Zoo.

He has established his own private zoo on his beautiful "Lakeside Farm" near here, and has filled it with all the strange animals he wanted to have when he was a youngster.

And he keeps the place open to the public. He even holds big barbecues to give an added treat to the people who come to see his collection.

He's doing it all to satisfy the yearning that tormented him when he was a kid.

The zoo consists of some 75 animals. These range in size and kind all the way from a pair of 24-foot python snakes up to an elephant. Scattered in between are a melange of tigers, a lion, varieties of monkeys, jaguars, the smallest pony in the world and what not.

Getz loves his animals. They remind him of poor kids. He was poor himself once and knows the value of a little kindness.

And he loves people. That's why he has his informal parties at which he has fed as many as 20,000 guests.

"I'm getting too old to go to other people's celebrations. I want them to come to mine instead," he says.

He doesn't say much more because he isn't much of a hand at talking.

He laughs most of the time because his dream has come true.

When he was a lad of 6 he went to work on a farm near Mechanicsburg, Pa. He had to work hard.

He recalls when he first saw a circus poster, depicting some of the jungle denizens.

There was a picture of tigers and an elephant on a crossroad sign board.

"What are those?" Getz asked. "I'll get some like that to play with," he said when they told him.

But wages for a six-year-old boy 50 years ago were not sufficient even for the purchase of the dog that Getz craved, to say nothing of a real tiger or elephant.

Then came the turn of fate. Getz rose. Today he is one of the country's most influential coal mine operators.

He has the menagerie coveted during his boyhood and he is sharing his happiness with the world.

With his two sons he lives between his farm here and Chicago, driving back and forth as fancy dictates.

Gave Steeds Away.

Some time ago he despatched a commission to Arabia when the notion seized him to have a herd of pure-blood Arabian horses.

When the animals arrived Getz gave them all away to friends. Why?

Because his friends admired them so much.

"I wanted them to have some fun, too," he says.

His zoo and farm are constantly open to the public.

The rich man's money is buying back his lost childhood.

Size and "Soul"

"The 'big business' corporations of this country never made a better move than when they concluded to make it easy for their employes to become part owners in the business in which they are employed. Among such corporations the Standard of Indiana is conspicuous.

"There is hardly an informed man in business of any kind who does not wish it were within his power to do as much for his employes as the Standard Oil Company of Indiana has done and is doing for its employes."

These paragraphs are quoted from an editorial appearing in the Atlantic News Telegraph of Atlantic, Iowa, June 8, 1926.

They indicate the trend of public opinion in regard to "big business" in general, and the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) in particular.

The old feeling that large corporations are necessarily "soulless" because of their size has practically disappeared.

Greater information results in a better understanding, and this has been true, particularly in the case of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

A number of years ago this Company adopted the policy of openly and frankly discussing its problems, and publishing facts concerning its work and its organization.

Open and straightforward statements of how the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) carries on its vast business, have brought about a truer public understanding of its work, a greater appreciation of the benefits of its operation, and a realization of the true significance of its great size.

It is not "soulless" because it is big. Rather, because it is big, in every sense of the word, it has soul.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is big not alone in numbers, in wealth of resources, in the extent of its activities. These are but the outward signs of its deep inner bigness of purpose and principle, of its high ideals and far-reaching vision.

The attitude of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) towards its employes, praised in the editorial above, is but one expression of the broad working principles of the Company.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is a big business. It does things in a big way. Yet its achievement is big only in proportion to the bigness of the purpose that inspires it, and the bigness of the service it renders to the thirty million people of ten Middle West states.

C. D. Bellows to Be Five-Minute Speaker

Maryville Man Is Chosen as One of "Prominent Men Doing Constructive Things."

C. D. Bellows of this city, president of the Missouri State Fair, has been chosen as one of a number of five-minute speakers for the Fair, August 14-21. These short addresses will be a part of the daily program arranged for the Missouri Association booth, the speakers to be "prominent men who are doing constructive things throughout the state" and to be used on the days that are most convenient for them to attend the fair.

Several of the five-minute talks will be in connection with the Missouri Picture Gallery, at which a display of photographs of agricultural, industrial and scenic Missouri is intended to create a desire among citizens to learn more about the state—inshort, to "See Missouri First."

In addition to Mr. Bellows, the following men will be heard in short talks at various hours throughout fair week, the the Missouri Association booth in the Agricultural Building:

Governor S. A. Baker; A. A. Speer, vice-chairman State Capital Commission; Otto C. Botz, president, the Missouri Association; Lieutenant-Governor Phil A. Bennett, Springfield; B. H. Piepmeier, Chief Engineer, State Highway Commission; W. D. Smith, secretary, Missouri State Fair; Carl F. G. Meier, president, St. Louis Chamber of Commerce; Capt. Jack Heiney, World War veteran and announcer for station WOS; E. F. McGrew, secretary State Highway Commission; Fred W. Mitchell, editor, Excelsior Springs Standard; Cecil W. Thomas, mayor, Jefferson City; F. W. A. Vesper, State Board of Agriculture; E. H. Winter, president, Missouri Press Association; Keith McCanse, State Game and Fish Commissioner; Joe Q. Heimberger, president Missouri Outdoor Advertising Association; C. P. Anderson, Commissioner State Marketing Bureau; F. H. Chambers, Supt. Missouri Confederate Home; Joseph S. Hubbard, secretary, Missouri Press Association; Wm. J. Findley, general secretary, St. Louis Chamber of Commerce; Morris Anderson, mayor, Hannibal; L. B. Clough, managing-director, St. Joseph Chamber of Commerce; C. U. Philley, president Philley Advertising Company, St. Joseph; Lou J. Holland, president Kansas City Chamber of Commerce; Paul J. Krusz, president, St. Louis Junior Chamber of Commerce; Roy B. Hinkle, State Labor Commissioner; John I Case, president, State Board of Agriculture; Henry Beardsley, attorney-at-law, Kansas City; Arch T. Hollenbeck, editor, West Plains Journal; S. B. Hunter, vice-president Southeast Missouri Trust Company, Cape Girardeau; Geo. A. Pickens, general secretary, the Missouri Association.

Princeton—Five Mercer County boys have departed for a month's military training at the camp at Des Moines.

Jefferson City—Figures compiled here reveal there is an average of one threshing machine for every 57 farms in the State.

IF DEATH CERTIFICATES TOLD THE TRUTH

They Would More Often Attribute the End of Life as Due to High Living, Poor Cooking, Lack of Sleep and Breathing Bad Air.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator From New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

In a London magazine I saw a little skit headed "Truthful Death Certificates." This is worth reading, so I quote it for your benefit:

"Some day we will tell the truth in the death certificates and the reports will be made out like this:

'Died after 30 years of over-eating.'

'Smothered himself to death; worked and slept in unventilated rooms.'

'Poisoned by his wife, who used wrong cooking methods.'

'Burned out; slept only six hours a night.'

'Killed by high living.'

'Good health is a luxury that all of us can enjoy if we are willing to play the game on a long law of averages'."

You will laugh over this article, but in it is hidden great wisdom. These certificates are true to fact. They tell the story of what happens to a good many men, especially city men.

There are certain simple rules of conduct which must govern every life, or disaster is on the way. In the first place there must be abundant sleep.

I know a man who goes to bed at midnight and gets up at four o'clock in the morning to play golf. He has an idea that exercise in the open air is all he needs to be well and happy. No one can question that exercise in the open air is desirable for everybody, but it cannot take the place of sleep. Sleep restores the nervous system and gives the tired muscles time to recover their vigor.

But it is not enough to sleep a lot. This sleep must be had in a well ventilated room. Otherwise, as is suggested in the newspaper article, the victim finds himself smothered to death.

Overeating or eating poorly-cooked foods is one of the most common vices. There can be no health or long life by one who indulges in such practices.

By high living we mean late hours, badly ventilated rooms, rich and unneeded food, mental excitement and wicked indulgence of every sort. One has but to watch the career of those who indulge in high living to realize how fatal it is. Not only is it fatal so far as life is concerned, but it is fatal to the usefulness and effectiveness of every career.

Read and ponder this article. It is worth while.

Answers To Health Queries.

L. W. Q.—My mother has a tumor growing on the brain and complains of being dizzy and at times almost unable to walk—would it be safe to leave her alone and will she drop over at any time?

A.—This depends upon the type of tumor and its location in the brain. The doctor attending your mother should be the best one to advise you concerning her particular care.

A. Reader. Q.—What would cause specks before the eyes and a feeling of numbness in the hands and feet during the day—the feeling can be described as "pins and needles."

A.—Have a careful urinalysis made, since there may be a possible kidney condition responsible. Poor circulation might also cause these symptoms.

A. J. R. Q.—What should a girl weigh who is twelve years old and 5 ft. 3 ins. tall?

2.—What do you suggest for the cure of dandruff?

3.—How can I get rid of freckles?

A.—For her age and height she should weigh about 105 pounds.

2.—Shampoo the hair frequently and use a good tonic. For further information send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

3.—To make freckles less noticeable you might apply equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide. Afterwards massage gently with a good cold cream as this treatment is apt to prove drying to the skin.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—It was a big day for the bulls on the Chicago Board of Trade today. Grain prices climbed surely and slowly from a steady opening to a close that was well above that of Saturday in all positions. Corn was especially strong.

Good commission house and short covering enabled wheat to close ⅝ to ¾ cents higher in all positions. There was a very substantial increase reported in the visible supply but this was offset by unchanged weather conditions in all sections of the belt. Cash prices were weak.

Corn closed sharply higher having registered gains of 1 to 1⅜ cents on all positions, the May delivery gaining most. The fact that the heat stricken areas of the belt received no rain and the continual posting of grain as out of condition contributed to the bulge.

Under the influence of the other pits oats awoke and registered advances.

Provisions closed higher.

LOCALS AGAIN IN A VICTORY

MERCHANTS DEFEAT HOPKINS TEAM IN 2-1 GAME.

ERRORS ARE COSTLY

Bauble By Each Team Allows Scoring. Wilson Umpires Good Game.—Large Crowd In Attendance.

Again the Maryville Merchants win.

Yesterday the Hopkins baseball team came to the local Fairgrounds and went down to a 1-2 defeat at the hands of the Maryville outfit.

It was a good game, according to the large crowd which witnessed it. Scoreless until the fourth inning and then until the eighth, it afforded thrill after thrill.

A bauble was chalked up to the credit of each team. In both instances it paved the way for scoring. In the fourth, with Hopkins at bat, Barnes, Maryville center fielder, failed to get under two fly balls, which allowed Hopkins to score.

To the credit of Barnes it must be said that the wind was against him, and on a normal afternoon he would have easily made the catches.

Maryville did not score until the eighth. Mayes, the first man up, grounded out. Then Laughlin, catcher, struck out, but Galen Turner, the Hopkins catcher dropped the ball, and the Maryville hitter beat the throw to first. Then Arthur singled deeply to center, scoring Laughlin. On the next play, Carmichael hit a long single to right and arthur scored.

The bad throw on Turner's part was bad luck. Otherwise he caught a fine game.

The umpiring of Claude Wilson was above reproach. He was liked by both teams.

St. Joseph Golf Club Host to Local Men

Members of Maryville Country Club to Spend Wednesday Afternoon on Highlands Links.

Members of the Maryville Country Club will be guests at an afternoon of golf Wednesday at the Highlands Club of St. Joseph. Play will start at 1 o'clock.

The local golfers who can arrange to go are asked to notify Martin A. Lewis, jr., or Dr. R. C. Person. Transportation will be arranged for all those who do not have cars.

The afternoon will be informal, it is announced, not in the nature of a tournament but a "get-acquainted" affair, at which foursomes will be made up of two St. Joseph players and two from Maryville. The St. Joseph club also invites any Maryville golfers who can come for a morning round to do so.

Today's St. Joseph Gazette had the following:

A group of 25 golfers from Maryville will be here Wednesday to engage the Highlands Golf and Country club team in a special match, officials of Highlands announced Sunday night.

This will be the first match of the season with the Maryville golfers, and it is possible that a return match will be played with them on the Maryville course later in the year.

Highlands golfers are busy brushing up on their game in preparation for the coming meet, and they expect to turn back the invading forces just as they have other out-of-town teams. Highlands will have 25 of its best golfers in trim for the meet.

Such golfers as Dr. A. R. Greenfield, Troy Wilson, Dr. T. O. Pierce, Fred Donovan, Gus Hillix and John Patt will lead the Highlands crew in their match next Wednesday. The pairings for the match:

Democrats in Early Start

Fordyce has extensive acquaintance among Democrats of national prominence and in 1920 raised funds in Missouri for the Democratic National Committee.

The selection of Fordyce and Dearmont by the candidates was attended by much harmony talk by candidates and members of the Democratic Executive Committee. No Democratic gathering in years has been so dovelike in its aspects. Everybody talked unity and peace and the burial of factionalism.

Senator James A. Reed, who returns from his probe of Pennsylvania and Illinois primary elections, in which he dug up facts which Democrats may capitalize in the fall campaign, made a suave harmony talk which put the candidates on their toes. Not once did he thunder against the World Court or other controversial issues. He spoke to the candidates and the executive committee behind closed doors and nothing could be heard but applause for the senator's well-rounded periods.

Those who participated in the conference which voted to recommend Fordyce for chairman were Congressmen Romjue of the First, Lozier of the Second, Milligan of the Third, Dickinson of the Sixth and Major of the Seventh, nominees in their respective districts for re-election; John J. Cochran, nominee in the Eleventh; Irwin Sale, nominee in the Tenth; James H. Fulbright, nominee in the Fourteenth, George Combes, nominee in the Fifth, and Dr. J. C. Whitsell, nominee in the Fourth Congressional District. The others were Hawes, State Superintendent Lee, nominated for re-election, and Judge Gantt, nominee for State Supreme Judge.

Lots at Fillmore and Thompson Sold

According to a warranty deed filed today with Mrs. Mamie Clardy, county recorder, W. C. and Mary D. Griffiths of Seneca County, Ohio, have sold to George W. Aley, for $3,000, the east 72 feet of lots 3 and 4, and a tract 12 by 61 feet along the north side of lot 3 and joining the alley at the west end, all in block 8, Roseberry's addition to Maryville.

The property is at the corner of Fillmore and Thompson streets.

Another deed records the transfer from Emerson F. and Mary E. Hammond to William E. Hammond of an undivided 3,381-3,962d interest in the south half of the northwest quarter, with the exception of a small tract, and also the north half of the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 19, township 63, range 35. The land is about half way between Arkoe and Barnard.

John Ditto left Sunday morning on a business trip to Topeka, Kan.

Miss Lillian James, who has been visiting Misses Clara and Margaret Langsford at Springfield for two weeks, returned home today. The Misses Langsford accompanied her to Maryville for a several days' visit.

Monte Munn Coming Up

One of the latest pugilistic sensations is Monte Munn, brother of the former wrestling champion, Wayne "Big" Munn. Monte, who is comparatively new at the ring racket, has been cutting down opponents in reckless fashion, winning most of his battles on knockouts. Some optimistic critics see him as a contender for Dempsey's laurels. That may be a bit far-fetched, of course, but he must at least be given credit for making a good start, and unless he's rushed too fast should go pretty far.

To Keep the Highways Safe

A Drastic Reduction in Frigidaire Prices!

Today, we announce a sweeping reduction in the prices of Frigidaire Electric Refrigerators.

The tremendous volume of Frigidaire sales (greater than all other electric refrigerators combined), and a vastly increased production capacity, have resulted in economies that now put electric refrigeration within the reach of every home and store.

No other electric refrigerator could offer such value. No other offers you the guarantee of General Motors, the endorsement of 200,000 users, the proven dependability, long life and economical operation of Frigidaire, nor the easy payment plan of the General Motors Acceptance Corporation.

Price reductions are as much as $90, including both the complete metal cabinet Frigidaires and Frigidaire units for ordinary ice-boxes. Come in today, or mail the coupon.

Phares Hardware Co.
East Side Square

These drastic price reductions affect both household and commercial models of Frigidaire. Whether you want Frigidaire for your home or place of business—whether you want one of the complete metal cabinet models or a mechanical unit for installation in your present ice-box—you can take advantage of new low prices that offer greater values than ever before.

COUNTY COURT MEN TO MEET

"FEEDER ROAD" PLAN TO GET JUDGES' ATTENTION.

MEETING AT SEDALIA

Supplementary System of Highways Is Urged by State Commission and Assistance Offered.

Sedalia, Mo., Aug. 9.—Judges of the county courts in the various counties of the state will gather here August 17, 18 and 19 for the annual convention of the County Judges Association of Missouri.

Numerous subjects and problems are to be taken up at the meeting of the organization and one which is expected to receive considerable attention is the building of county highway systems in each of 114 counties of the state to supplement the main state highways in the counties as "feeder roads."

Such a plan was recently urged by the state highway commission, which pointed out that it would be years before the state could get to such a program. In order to keep pace with the state system it was urged that county systems be begun as quickly as possible. It is pointed out that the state road system is nearing completion, but that there are a few counties that have made no plans for a county system to enable any considerable number of persons to get to them in comfort.

The economic loss to the counties will be greater until such "feeder roads" are constructed, officials of the highway department declared. They add that the county system would result in as much good to individual counties as the state roads have to the state.

Counties can begin in a systematic way to lay out the county systems, it is pointed out. Engineering assistance has been promised by the state highway department. No financial assistance from the state should be expected, however, the officials of the department assert, because state funds will not permit. The state system will need all state road revenue available.

Good, all weather county roads should be built in the same manner in which the highway department builds the state system, it is explained, and then adequate maintenance should be provided on the county "feeder" roads, the same as on the state system. Heretofore, when a county road was built, it was, in almost every instance, allowed to go to pieces due to no maintenance being provided.

Miss Maye Sturm returned yesterday from Hamilton where she was the week-end guest of Miss Helen Henkins.
